THE LAST DAUGHTER

A Story of Connection, Country and Community

Join us for a special screening of The Last Daughter

This powerful documentary shares Aunty Brenda Matthew's journey of identity, family, resilience, and her deep connection to Country. Through her story, audiences gain a greater understanding of Aboriginality culture, belonging, and the importance of maintaining strong connections to land and community.

Why is this film relevant to Landcare?

The story of Aunty Brenda aligns closely with the values of Landcare because both focus on caring for Country and protecting the environment for future generations.

Aunty Brenda's story highlights:

- The importance of a shared connection and care for Country.
- The value of traditional knowledge and cultural practices.
- Passing knowledge and wisdom on to younger generations.
- Respecting and caring for the land, waterways, and natural resources.

Landcare shares these same principles by encouraging communities to work together to protect, restore, and enhance the environment. Both recognise that caring for the land is a shared responsibility that benefits everyone.

More Than a Film

This isn't just about watching a film. It's about starting a conversation about the land we all depend on.

The screening provides an opportunity to:

- Learn from eachother when caring for Country and what gets in the way
- Connect with local landholders, community members and mob to explore how traditional knowledge and modern Landcare practices can complement one another.
- Discuss the future of our landscapes, farms, waterways, and communities.

Join the Conversation -

Come and hear a story about connection to Country, meet other local landholders, and explore what caring for our landscapes means for the future of our farms and communities. Together, we can learn, share knowledge, and strengthen our commitment to caring for Country for generations to come. Find other events here
